Columbia University’s Oral History Master of Arts B.A./M.A. Program

Take Classes as an Undergrad towards an Oral History Master’s Degree

• Who is eligible?
Undergraduates enrolled in Barnard College, Columbia College, General Studies, or the School of Engineering and Applied Science.

• When can you apply?
Juniors apply to take classes their senior year. Application deadline is April 15, 2015.

• What is the Oral History Master of Arts (OHMA)?
OHMA is a one-year interdisciplinary Master of Arts degree training students in oral history method and theory.

• What can you do with an oral history degree?
Our graduates work in museums, historical societies, advocacy organizations, media, the arts, education, human rights and development. OHMA is also excellent preparation for doctoral work in fields such as anthropology, history, journalism, and American studies or professional degrees in law, education, or social work.

Learn More at our December 4th Open House
509 Knox Hall, 606 W 122nd St, 6:30-8PM
Refreshments Provided. RSVP with QR code
http://oralhistory.columbia.edu/