PSYCHOLOGY

The Psychology department does not publish a list of available tutors or staff a Help Room. Students should speak with their professors and teaching assistants.

STATISTICS

Help Room

In addition to regular Teaching Assistant office hours, The Department offers Help Room hours to students in STAT 1001, 1111, and 1211. While students in these courses may find that the Teaching Assistant assigned to their section may be their best resource, students in these courses may attend hours for Assistants or Readers assigned to any section of their course. Students in other courses should attend hours of the Assistant or Reader assigned to their section. Updated Help Room Schedule at: <http://statistics.columbia.edu/content/help-room>

WRITING CENTER

<http://www.college.columbia.edu/core/uwp/writing-center>

The Writing Center provides writing support to the entire Columbia community, from first-year undergraduates to faculty. In one-on-one consultations and workshops, our consultants offer feedback and strategies to help you improve at every stage of your writing, from brainstorming to final drafts. To learn more about what happens in a Writing Center consultation, click here. Click here to make an appointment

Global Learners Open Writing Workshops: Most Fridays from 11:00 am to 12:30 pm the Writing Center hosts a writing group for international students who are taking University Writing. To request a spot, students should respond to an on-line form by 5:00 pm the Thursday before. Attendance is limited; students will be emailed to confirm the reservation. Click here to fill out the form.
