Standards of the Columbia Community

January 24, 2013

At Columbia, we believe that education and development extends beyond the classroom and that it happens wherever you are. Most of our students live on campus and are members or leaders in multiple clubs and organizations, creating an active campus life and vibrant residential community.

Community Resources

Office of Residential Programs

The Office of Residential Programs (RP) offers students at Columbia College and The Fu Foundation School of Engineering and Applied Science resources to support and promote their intellectual, social, emotional, and interpersonal development. The RP staff consists of students and professionals, who partner with Housing Services, Office of Judicial Affairs, Public Safety, Center for Student Advising, Counseling and Psychological Services, and others to create an unforgettable living experience. It is the hope of RP that students will utilize these staff and resources to actively involve themselves in their residential community. [read more]

Office of Judicial Affairs & Community Standards

The Office of Judicial Affairs and Community Standards (OJA) assists the Columbia undergraduate community with the maintenance of a safe, honest, and responsible campus environment. Students may come in contact with the OJA if it is alleged that they have engaged in behavior that is inconsistent with University, Columbia College, Columbia Engineering, or School of General Studies policies and/or federal, state, or local laws. Community Responsibilities

As a member of the Columbia University community, each student is responsible for becoming familiar with several policies and procedures:

- Rules Of University Conduct (Chapter XLIV of the Statutes of the University)
- General academic and behavioral policies, as outlined by the schools:
  - Columbia College Bulletin
  - Columbia Engineering Bulletin
Community Standards

Students and other members of the Columbia community are urged report any violation, incident, or behavioral concern involving Columbia College, Columbia Engineering, or School of General Studies undergraduate students. After receiving a report, follow-up may occur with Residential Programs, The Office of Judicial Affairs and Community Standards, or University conduct. [read more]
