Why are men committing violence? Specifically at Columbia and Harlem & Morningside Heights? Do we all tacitly endorse hegemonic violence? How do we dissociate violence from masculinity? What are some of the challenges of having that conversation about violence within our own student groups? We want to get the self-identified men of Columbia together to seek answers to these questions by engaging one another in a safe space that allows us to self-reflect and find solutions. Join us in tackling violence and rethinking the male identity.
